

FINANCIAL SUPPORTGraduate Programs*Department of Cultural and Social Anthropology (CASA)
Stanford University

The Department of Cultural and Social Anthropology at Stanford makes need-blind admissions decisions, offering financial support to approximately eight applicants through a combination of fellowship, teaching assistantship, and research assistantship. Beyond the funded admissions allotment, we are sometimes able to admit additional students who have external funding. We encourage all applicants to apply for outside funding. Below are some agencies which provide graduate fellowships. You are urged to consult your local university or college library for reference books such as the Annual Register of Grant Support for additional sources of support. Information about federally funded fellowship programs may be obtained by calling (800) 4 FEDAID. A good source of fellowship information may be found in the web sites listed below:
