- Discussion: “Considering Vocation: The Witness of the Fathers” by Khaled Anatolios
  - How do we take the “radical and universal statement” that “a properly Christian view of the question of vocation must... be centered on the economy of the humanization of God and the deification of humanity” and apply it to your life?
  - Anatolios insists that one must unite human will with divine will. Is this possible? Do you feel the two are conflicting? How do we discern God’s will?
  - Can we “deconstruct the artificial separation between ‘spiritual devotion’ and interaction with the world”? Where does this separation exist?
