It's time to take a break. Time to build the new society - the one res-ed can't plan for you. Time to take a minute (or even ten!) for yourself, for your present.

The Age of Delayed Gratification is over. The B+ won't kill you; eight more years of fatigue just might. Have we traded the risk of hitting the mean for the guarantee of boredom?

It's time to take a break, and to talk. To get beyond the endless discourse of your wilted spinach salad and dreary lectures. It's time to share, to liberate, to reveal something of our selves, our pain, of our very nature.

It's time to go home.
