113. To the left of the South Face is a yellowish, overhanging, flared chimney. Climb the chimney for two pitches (the first is short) to its top. A short third class section leads to a gully with two obvious cracks. Climb the right crack for two pitches to a large belay ledge. Walk right on the ledge to the left most crack and climb it 160 feet to another ledge at the base of the headwall. Move to the South Face and finish on that route.
