Fiscal regimes and the political economy of premodern states

Edited by Andrew Monson and Walter Scheidel

Contents

Introduction
Andrew Monson (New York University) and Walter Scheidel (Stanford University): Studying fiscal regimes

Diversity and commonalities in early extraction regimes
Terence D'Altroy (Columbia University): Inka
Michael Smith (Arizona State University): Aztecs
Michael Jursa (University of Vienna): Ancient Near East

Determinants of intensification and abatement
Andrew Monson (New York University): Hellenistic states
James Tan (Union College) Roman republic
Walter Scheidel (Stanford University) and Gilles Bransbourg: Roman empire
John Haldon (Princeton University): Post-Roman Europe and Byzantium
Mark Lewis (Stanford University): Early China from the Warring States to the Tang
Kent Gang Deng (London School of Economics): From Song to Qing China

Fiscal practices in 'secure' states
Hugh Kennedy (School of Oriental and African Studies, London): Umayyads and Abbasids
Metin Cosgel (University of Connecticut): Ottomans
Philip Brown (Ohio State University): Tokugawa Japan

Fragmented political ecologies and institutional innovation
Emily Mackil (UC Berkeley): Ancient Greek city-states and federal states
Josiah Ober (Stanford University): Classical Athens
David Stasavage (New York University): The expansion of public debt in late medieval and early modern Europe

Comparative perspectives and new frontiers
Peter Bang (University of Copenhagen): Tributary empires and the New Fiscal Sociology
Andrew Monson (New York University) and Walter Scheidel (Stanford University): Global patterns in fiscal regimes
Edgar Kiser (University of Washington) and Margaret Levi (University of Washington and University of Sydney): An agenda for future research