Dear Tom,

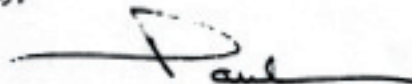

Skip and I send heartiest congratulations on the occasion of your great anniversary and the fine blast that your many admirers have laid on for you. Unfortunately for these two admirers, the siren call of a subsidized boondoggle in Italy has appealed to our more selfish natures and so we can be with you in spirit only.

We salute your long and illustrious career that has brought so much deep understanding of the foundations of our communication profession. When Bob Price and I first saw the innovative new approach you were using for spread channels we knew right away that we were in the presence of a fresh new mind capable of great things.

And so it has proved. Knowing you, I doubt that the present festivities will barely slow you down more than a few days and that you will keep on for a long time more.

Our best to Sarah and your whole family who we hope are also hugely enjoying this well deserved salute to a remarkable guy.

Fondly,
