- US Census Bureau Race Data [48]
- Images of Native Americans [49]: digital companion to an exhibit of rare books, photographs, illustrations, and other archival and manuscript materials. Includes materials that reflect European interpretations of Native Americans, scientific and anthropological research, United States military surveys, images of popular culture, literary and political observations, and artistic representations. From the UC Berkeley Bancroft Library.
- Racial Profiling: [50] from the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU)
- Racial Profiling Data Collection Resource Center, Northeastern University [51]: In the late 1990s, in response to allegations of racial profiling, jurisdictions around the country began to track information about those who are stopped, searched, ticketed, and/or arrested by police officers. These data collection efforts are an attempt to provide the tangible numbers that will enable police and community leaders to better understand their policing activities. With this understanding, departments will be able to examine and revamp policing strategies based on effectiveness, reconfigure deployment of police resources, or take other measures
